Price.				USES AND REMARKS.
Per.	Rs.	A.	P.
Seer of 24 Rs. Weight.	0	2	0	Called in Hindustani Kolungie. Is considered cooling in its nature, given in cases of Eruption on the skin—Dose 1 Pagoda weight—grown at Silghut and elsewhere.
do.	0	2	0	Cooling and demulcent, Dose 1 Tola—grown all over Mysore.
do.	0	1	0	As an Anthelmintic—Also in combination with other drugs as an electuary in Rheumatism—Dose 1 Pagoda weight —Procured from the Babenbooden Jungles.
do.	0	1	8	Cooling and demulcent given in Dysentry—Dose 1 Pagoda weight—grows near Bangalore.
do.	0	4	0	Powdered and blown into the eye in purulent Opthalmia—Sometimes given internally for Rheumatism—Dose ½ Tola—Grows in all the stunted Jungles in Mysore. "This is undoubtedly an useful medicine in "country sore-eyes" whilst the affection is not severe. It seems to be the basis of an eye ointment lately sold at Bangalore and Madras which proved useful in several cases, but failed in an acute case which came under my observtaion."
do.	0	0	10	Used as a Carminative, given in decoction for bilious and stomachic complaints, flatulency and Rheumatism—Grows in all Mysore—Dose 1 Tola.
do.	0	6	0	The skins are to be removed from the seeds—which are then given with Rhubarb and Nitre in cases of suppression or repression of Urine—Dose 1 or 2 Tolas.
do.	0	0	10	Given in Flatulence, Indigestion and Costiveness, and applied as a rubefacient—Supposed to destroy the effects of other medicines if used at the same time—Its emetic effects are apparently unknown to the Natives. Dose ½ Tola.
do.	0	4	0	The embryo and cotyledons being removed the seed is used as a drastic purgative. Dose 1 to 4 seeds—this is a most valuable Purgative in doses of from 2 to 3 grains given in some aromatic oil, and from its small bulk would be invaluable on active service—the seeds should be boiled or otherwise exposed to a moist heat and the embryo extracted. The remainder may then be made into a pill.
do.	0	0	10	Cooling, given in acute dysentery in conjunction with nut galls and butter milk.—It should be toasted before being powdered—Dose ½ to 1 Tola.
do.	0	2	0	The seeds are skinned and ground into a paste and applied to cutaneous eruptions. The use of the hair as an anthelmintic apparently not known to the Natives.
do.	0	2	6	Cooling and Carminative given in Billious complaints and loss of appetite—grown at Tegatoor in the Chittledroog Division.
do.	0	4	0	The seeds are heated, the skin and embryo removed, then powdered—Given as an Anthelmintic Dose 20 grains.
do.	0	2	6	As a stomachic in Dyspepsia, flatulence and fevers—Is laxative in large doses. Grows both wild and cultivated in the Coorg and Nuggur Jungles—Dose ½ to 1 Pagoda weight.
do.	0	1	8	Poisonous, used as an intoxicant—considered that if habitually taken in small doses it prevents the poisonous effect of snake bites. Dose ½ of a seed—Grows in Jungles of Mysore.
do.	0	1	4	Given toasted and combined with other substances in Diarrhœa and Dysentery—If given raw and alone it is purgative—Dose ½ to 1 Tola—Grows in the Jungles of Mysore.
do.	0	2	0	Cooling and demulcent—Dose 1 Tola.
do.	0	6	0
do.	0	4	0	Demulcent. This does not seem to be the same plant as that mentioned in Ainslie as "Neermoolie." The decoction of this plant is strongly diuretic—Dose 1 Pagoda weight.
do.	0	8	0	Demulcent and cooling—Dose 1 Tola—Grows in the vicinity of Bangalore.
do.	0	2	6	Considered a very valuable medicine in an immense number of complaints—given in electuaries with other ingredients.
do.	0	4	0	Used as a Carminative in chronic dysentery—Grown in the Coorg, Nuggur and Sorub jungles.
do.	0	4	0	Considered astringent if given after being roasted, but purgative if given raw, Applied to the eyes so as to cause a flow of tears is said to cure Rheumatism in the head—Grows plentifully in all the western jungles of Mysore.
do.	0	1	0	Used in Rheumatism, cold, chilliness, flatulence, and as an antidote for Narcotic poisons—Dose 1 Pagoda weight
do.	0	2	0	Bruised and mixed with Curinge oil is applied as a liniment in cutaneous diseases. Its oil is said to be given mixed with sugar for Leprosy. The juice of the leaves and flowers is applied to sore eyes.
do.	0	8	0	The leaves rubbed down and heated in oil form a strong purgative—Dose 1 Pagoda weight—grows in the Bidedy Jungles.
do.	0	2	6	Used in loss of appetite, Flatulence, Diarrhœa, Dysentry and in boils and Eruptions on the body —grown in the Biddedy Jungles.

do.	0	0	0	The juice of the leaves boiled with castor oil until the water has evaporated is kept for use in carapang, scrofula, contraction of the joints, &c. &c.—Dose of the medicated oil for an adult 1 tola—Grows near Bangalore.
do.	0	0	0	The whole plant to be dried, powdered and given in doses of ½ to 1 tola to purify the blood—The plant is sometimes boiled in castor oil and given for the same purpose—Grows in and around Bangalore.—The Cassia Tora bruised and mixed with lime juice is a good remedy for Ringworm and Leprosy vulgaris.
do.	0	0	0	The whole plant is dried, powdered, sifted, and given in ½ tola doses for dropsies and certain other diseases—It is also given in infusion or decoction for feverishness ; the juice of the leaves mixed with castor oil is given in carapang—Grows around Bangalore.
do.	0	0	0	Given in decoction for thirst, feverishness, catarrhs, &c.—Is cultivated all over Mysore.
do.	0	0	0	The whole plant in powder, infusion or decoction is given in fever, ague, colds, coughs, Rheumatism, colic or asthma.
do.	0	0	0	In decoction for Hœmerrhoids, intermittent fevers and polydepsia—Dose ½ to 1 tola weight—Grows around Bangalore.
do.	0	1	4	Made into a balsam with 4 parts gingilee oil and given in contracted joints, cutaneous diseases, bilious habits, heat of system, and externally applied to ulcers—Dose 1 tola in butter.
do.	0	0	0	The bark of the root only is used—This and the bark of the Surgum root are given in equal parts in some forms of Leprosy. The fresh root bruised into a pulp with salt often relieves toothache, the milk of the plant is equally efficacious—The whole plant may be used as a poultice to swollen and painful joints—Dose ½ Pagoda weight—Grows all over Mysore—I have often used this medicine in Leprosy and other complaints but without obtaining any distinct or recognisable effect of any kind—I am not even sure that it is alternative—The Doses I have used have not been more than 10 grains and in these it has not even nauseated—I have not used the Calotropis Procera which is said to be more active and is supposed by Wight to be the true Mudar of Bengal—The plant is common near Hurryhur growing on black soil—The C. Gigantea grows on all soils.

Price.				USES AND REMARKS.
Per.	Rs.	A.	P.
Seer.....	0	0	0	The juice of the fresh leaves mixed with Gingilee oil and black pepper and boiled till the water is dissipated, is used as a liniment for headaches, Rheumatism, and Opthalmia—Dose 1 Tola—Grows in Bangalore.
do.	0	0	0	In Leprosy, contracted joints, skin diseases, &c. &c.—Given in Doses of ½ tola twice a day in powder or electuary—Grows near Ballapore.
do.	0	0	8	The leaves are very poisonous and so probably is the bark. A decoction of the former has proved fatal in several cases in a few minutes—The fact ought to be a caution against the unguarded use of this common ornamental tree—Common in Bangalore.
do.	0	4	0	Is used by natives as a purgative in rather uncertain doses—This seed which is procurable in great abundance near Bangalore is a very valuable, safe, and certain purgative, intermediate in strength between Rhubarb and Jalap—It should be boiled in water for 3 minutes, dried, reduced to very fine powder, and given in 1 dram doses—It should be conjoined with a little ginger or omum water—It may be combined with cream of Tartar like Jalap—it is not however so apt to nauseate as the latter, and is not quite so active although equally certain in its operation; I have given it in 500 or 600 cases.
do.	0	0	0	As a tonic in small doses and emetic in large ones—given with pepper—This nut has an intensely bitter taste, I have used it largely as a tonic and febrifuge but with very uncertain results. In some severe cases it has seemed to cure intermittents as rapidly as Quinine, whereas in others it has had no effect—I consider the bark of the root as a much more energetic and certain remedy than the seed—In doses of 10 to 30 grains, the nut is said to be emetic.
do.	0	0	0	In infusion as a diuretic and deobstrusent—Grows abundantly near Bangalore—My attention was attracted to this plant by notices in the newspapers of its successful employment in the cure of Leprosy at Pondicherry—I have tried it in a considerable number of cases but have not been able to ascertain its true value. I do however put some confidence in it—As a purifier of the blood I have found it useful—It may be considered as a palliative but not a cure for Leprosy.
do.	0	0	0	The powdered roots and juice of this plant are used by the natives as an emetic—I have administered this medicine in at least 1000 cases and found it most valuable—In dysentry and as a simple emetic it is in every way comparable with Ipecacuanha—The dose I use is 20 to 30 grains combined with ½ or 1 grain of Tartar emetic if strong emesis is required—In dysentery the dose is 3 to 5 grains with 10 to 20 of gum-arabic. If the dysentery distinctly arise from intermittent disease, Quinine is conjoined—The form of the medicine I use is the powder of the dry leaf—If the roots were used, the supply would be soon exhausted, besides I have found it less certain than the leaf—The preparation of the juice would be at all times troublesome and tedious. In catarrhs and chronic coughs it seems also to act well.
do.	0	0	0	Used as an emetic but is uncertain in its operation—Grows near Bangalore.
do.	0	0	0	Said to be used by the natives in Diarrhœas and dysentery—I have used the powdered mango seed very frequently as an Anthelmintic (for the long round species) in doses of 20 to 30 grains and found it useful—It contains a large quantity of gallic acid, and I have given it with great success in bleeding piles and Menorrhagia.
do.	0	0	0	Said to be a valuable bitter and tonic.
do.	0	0	0	The use of this bark as an Anthelmintic for "tape worm" is well known in Europe but I have never met with a case among the natives in Bangalore. The shell of the fruit is a valuable tonic and astringent, and in decoction with cloves is the best remedy I know for the chronic dysenteries under which the native poor so often suffer.
do.	0	0	0	Used as an astringent in bowel complaints—I have found it useful in diarrhœas especially those connnected with dropsy, I have used it in place of oak bark for gargles and enemata, and found it a perfect substitute.
do.	0	0	0	A superior febrifuge to Neem bark ; vide No. 26—Dose 10 grains.
do.	0	0	0	Useful in fomentation for relieving pain in a diseased part.
do.	0	0	0	I have used this gamboge (obtained from Nuggur) as a purgative—It acted well though not so strongly as the Siam variety—The gamboge tree is spread over a large extent of country in the Nuggur Jungles, occupying a middle position between the edge of the Western ghauts and the table land in the other direction—If the natives would collect any quantity of it in its raw state there would I am satisfied from some experiments I have made, be no difficulty in producing it perfectly pure in the "Lump" form: the "Pipe" form might be more difficult—No inducement however is sufficient to stimulate the Nuggur natives to collect it—The gum (juice) at no time runs very freely from the tree, it therefore requires some pains to procure much of it, and it is very difficult to obtain it in anything like a pure state.
do.	0	0	0	The fresh juice of this plant or an infusion acts as a diuretic in doses of 2 drams thrice a day—Grows all over Mysore—I have used the juice in a few hopeless cases of dropsy and found its diuretic effect very great—It deserves further investigation.
do.	0	0	0	The Tuberous root is said to be a cathartic but uncertain in operation—Grows in Bangalore.
do.	0	0	0	This valuable dye and tanning substance might be used in medicine in those cases in which tannic acid is necessary—It thrives at Bangalore and Hoonsoor—Could be cultivated to any extent.
do.	0	0	0	An empyreumatic fluid prepared by "distillation by descent," is valuable in the treatment of scaly diseases of the skin.
do.	0	0	0	As a tonic and in bowel complaints—Plant scarce in Mysore.

		Note.—The Oils contained in the above List form the commencement of a Collection of all the Oils of the Madras Presidency, which is being made for the Madras Government. The whole of the Fixed Oils have been prepared by the Exhibitor (except when otherwise stated on the Labels) and to ensure the perfect purity of the specimens the utmost care has been observed in every process. These Oils may therefore be looked upon as perfectly pure, and presenting very fine specimens of what may be obtained with ordinary Machinery carefully worked.
		No unusual modes of purification have been adopted, simple filtration through bibulous paper being all they required.
		In addition to the above the following is a List of seeds known to contain Oils (all of them New.) Owing however to their not being procurable in sufficient quantities at this season it has been found impracticable to prepare samples of Oil in time for the Exhibition.
		Sand Box-tree, (Hura Crepitans.)
